

Historical Fiction For Girls (12-18)

Witch Child

By Celia Rees
Fleeing persecution as a witch, Mary heads to America hoping to start a better life. But she finds her past difficult to escape.

What I Saw and How I Lied

By Julie Blundell
Just after her father returns from WWII, a G.I. who served with him shows up drawing Evie into a dangerous mystery.

Fever 1793

By Laurie Halse Anderson
Mattie lives with her mother and grandfather in Philadelphia in 1793 when an epidemic of the dreaded Yellow Fever strikes leaving no one untouched.

No Shame, No Fear

By Ann Turnbull
Susanna is a Quaker living in Britain when it is illegal to practice her faith. William is a wealthy Anglican. They meet and fall in love, but there are many obstacles to their being together.

The Edge on the Sword

By Rebecca Tingle
After she is betrothed to a Chief, the daughter of a West Saxon king must battle foes and escape kidnapping attempts in this novel of the Middle Ages.

Ten Cents a Dance

By Christine Fletcher
Ruby, a poor girl living in Chicago in the 1940s, takes up work as a taxi dancer to support her family and is drawn into a dangerous world.

The Other Countess

By Eve Edwards
Lady Eleanor and the Earl of Dorset find themselves drawn to each other, but he must marry a wealthy lady to restore his family's fortune, and Eleanor's family have no money.

Folly

By Marthe Jocelyn
A scullery maid in love with a soldier. A young orphan forced to live in a foundling hospital. Both face tragedy in this novel of Victorian London.

Vixen

By Lila Fine
Set in the Roaring Twenties, Gloria feels trapped by an engagement, her seemingly-perfect cousin Clara is hiding a few secrets, and her friend Lorraine's spite has turned into scheming.

The Season

By Sarah MacLean
Determined to avoid marriage as long as possible, strong-willed Alex, along with her two best friends, gets caught up in a mystery in the midst of her first season.